AN INSTALLATION AT ALL SOULS'.

Pastor Shippen Formally Welcomed by His Flock-Rev. Robert Collyer's Eloquent Discourse-Other Ceremonies Attending the Interesting Event.

Pew and corner and aisle, in gallery and on floor, were packed with an interesting congregation last night during the installation of Rev. Rush R. Shippen as pastor at All Souls' Church. The exercises commenced at half-past seven o'clock with an organ voluntary, followed by the introductory service by Rev. J. T. Bixby, the singing of an anthem; Scripture reading by Rev. F. B. Hornbrooke, the rendering of a Te Deum in fine style by the choir, and a sermon by Rev. Robert Collyer. This distinguished clergyman is a tall, sturdy-looking man, with the Danish-English style of race, surmounted by a dome-like forehead. His voice, strong, rich, and well modulated, was yet a disappointment in lacking that penetrating clearness so necessary to convey the lumious ideas for which he is famous. His text was the sixteenth verse of the the twenty-first chapter of Revelations, "The city lieth over square. The length is as large as the breadth. The length and the breadth and the height of it character of the perfect Christian." No matter how men may differ from us on points of faith, we feel in our hearts that they must come to the City of God as best they can. Men must give the best account of themselves, and live lives true to their own nature, or they will not attain that elevation for which they were intended. It makes no difference whether they are Germans, or Scotch, or English-where a man comes from is no matter. We may count them by their thoughts and deeds as benefactors of their race, while we know little about them. In the true Christian world men are gathered from every tribe, with all possible variety of character breaking out in all possible variety of thought. When we strike the still wider lines which enclose the whole civilized world, when we examine "the square-sided city," most foreibly illustrated. Men were there from all sections of the world, each exhibiting the characteristics of his sections. In the exhibits of the man from the East were shown evidence that the prevailing quality of his section was reflection; in the Western man's work were the signs of enterprise; from the North came the signs of reasoncold, logical thought-while the South glowed with a luxuriance of beauty, a savage energy in its magnificence, all of which was but the reflex of the nature beneath. A completeness of beauty is only to be found in a grouping of the whole. You go to the East for the past, to the West for the future, to the North for cool reasoning, to the South East; science, to the West: logic, to the North; poetry, to the South. All these are needed for the find a perfect man he will be the embodiment of oysters and condemned 250 bushels. these qualities. This is the secret of the poet. We nust have the power to look backward as well as forward. Genius is the city which lieth foursquare. Scan all men of genius; you will find them four-square-having emotion, reflection, logic, science. So religion does not live in one place to the true of the religious life. Where all these qualities are each equal and none master we find the That the general nature of the business intended to | perfect life. While we must, in some measure, from our nature, be more or less one-sided, do not | has completed a careful microscopic ex Now, asked the preacher, why should there not be a church of God answering to this four-square city of God? There was as yet no such church full grown, but it was coming. And he believed that the Unitarian Church offered the Divine hospitality more largely and liberally than any other. It is fitting there should be such a church in Washington, the Capital City, which was the centre of the Nation. This congregation had the chance to build such a church under the leadership of the new pastor, Mr. Shippen, to whom he paid a high compliment and Remedies," which will be followed by music, for ability and zealous work; he thought the opportunity was fully offered. Rev. R. P. Stebbins then offered the installation whole church with its solemn and sonorous sound. Rev. Charles G. Mr. Ames is young, dark-haired, clear-voiced, with a clear-cut, handsome face. Rev. Grindall Reynolds, a tall, white-bearded gentleman, with a remarkably rich and magnetic voice, and with much oratorical grace, delivered the charge to the pastor in an impressive and eloquent manner. Rev. Dr. A. P. Putnam delivered the address to the people, and, after an anthem by the choir, the new pastor pronounced a benediction and the congregation dissolved. The church was very prettily decorated with flowers, especially noticeable among which was the exquisite cross prepared by Mr. John H. Small and put up in front of the altar. At ten o'clock this morning a conference meeting will be held in the church, lasting until one o'clock. The meeting will be opened by a devotional service led by Rev. Mr. Wilson, of Salem. At eleven o'clock Hon, George B, Loring will take the chair, and an essay will be read by Rev. Mr. Hornbrooke on "Christianity Larger Than Its Interpreters," to be followed by discussion. In the evening, at eight o'clock, there will be brief addresses by several speakers on "Unitarianism and Its Forward Look." Among the speakers will be Rev. Messrs. Collyer, Stebbins. An Independent Society Organized-Talk About Building a Church, A majority of the signers to a call were present at the residence of Mrs. T. E. Llovd. corner of Eleventh and C streets southwest, last evening, for the purpose of organizing a new and independent Methodist society. Mr. S. P. Keller presided, and after a general discussion of the subject it was decided that the society should be conducted in accordance with the discipline of the Methodist Church, but free from the control of the Baltimore conference. Subscriptions sufficient to maintain the society for a year was pledged, and a committee was appointed to report at a future meeting whether or not it would be desirable to Housekeeping Goods at Close employ a pastor or continue the present course of having volunteers fill the pulpit. Meanwhile the society will worship at Kendall Chapel. An election for officers was then held, resulting in the choice of the following: Trustees, Messrs, William Worrell, J. K. Sharp, W. J. THE HITZ CASE.

The Petition Overruled and an Appeal Taken to the Supreme Court.

Immediately after the court in banccity can be no longera matter of doubt, as the differ-Chief Justice Cartter and Justices Hagner and James on the bench-convened yesterday morning the hearing on the petition of Mrs. Jane C. Hitz as to the non-liability of her husband, the Swiss Consul-General, in a civil action in this jurisdistion was resumed. General Mussey said that while he was not connected with the present case in any way, still if it assumed a certain phase he would become indirectly interested. With that view he would like to submit certain authorities touching on the liability of foreign representatives, that the counsel might have the benefit of them. Mr. Wilson commenced speaking, but had not proceeded far when the judges held a consultation on the bench. It lasted only a few minutes, when the Chief-Justice said:

I do not think it worth while to take up further time in discussing this question after the judgment at law and the action of the court in this equity proceeding and the traverse of the question of fact involved in the affairs of a business man who has bought and sold property, banked, &c. We should not feel at liberty to disturb this judgment rendered. We do not see anything in this question-that could possibly affect the amity of the two countries or bring them into collision. It is true that there is a great question behind it. The existence of nations is a great question; but this point seems to us now the part of Kate, is also a daughter of the Colonel. to come too late. It is an afterbirth. While Miss Bettie Hurdle, the Ruth, is too well known to I am satisfied that the plaintiffs have sent their messenger on a wrong errand, and that they are possessing property which the law says they shall not have, and while I think they ought not to have it, the opinion of the court is otherwise. I am satisfled that this is no impediment to the case, and would not operate to create one. I feel that in the last hours of a long and laborious term, after we have given the parties a standi juris on the record, we have done enough to help them up to the Supreme Court of the United States with the whole question to help them up to the litigious plain. We will overrule this petition, so as to give the party her day in court, that she may be heard above. Counsel may read the decree again, and, if there is no other exception, will

VIRGINIA POLITICS.

The break from the ranks of Bourbonsm has already begun in this section. This is no hearsay statement. We know the men .- Fredericksburg Recorder.

A writer from Southwestern Virginia says: "General Mahone's course in the Senate is enthusiastically indorsed. I have the first Readjuster to find who does not indorse him." I never saw the Readjusters more determined, and if there are any that are not indorsing General Mahone I don't know them. He certainly has not betrayed his party in this county.-

From a private letter written by a gentleman of Glouces-The Readjusters and colored Republicans of King George County, Virginia, in a joint mass-meeting last week unanimously passed a resolution "declaring that General Mahone has done the work of years in restoring to Virginia the promi n ence of a former period.' The Bourbon Democrats are raising their hands in holy horror at what they call the repudiation principles of the Readjusters. Did it ever strike them that the $15,000,000 set apart for West Virginia was repudiated by the Democrats of that State? Yet such is the fact.-Fredericksburg Recorder on the 4th of April, the following was passed by a unanimous vote: "Resolved, That we have in General William Ma hone, Readjuster Senator from Virginia, entire confidence, both as to his ability and the purity of his patriotism.

"Resolved, That we heartily approve of his bold and manly course in the Senate of the United States, and of his expressed determination to pursue, without reference to party names, such a course as will result in a better feeling between the two sections of the country for the future, and in the ultimate restoration of peace and prosperity to the people of Vir ginia." THE HOUSE OF ROSS, AND OTHER STORIES. By A. G. RIDDLE, author of "Bart Ridgeley," &c. Boston: Hall & Whiting. Washington: James

The principal story of this volume is fully as well told as the former ones from the pen of our distinguished District Attorney. He carries into his novels the same keen analysis of character that he exhibits in his preparation of legal documents, and by what he has already publish has shown that, had he chosen to devote himself and gentlemen. Lowest Prices. to literature alone, he would have made as great a success as a novelist as he has acquired reputation as an attorney. In the present work the scenes are mostly laid in that portion of the United States of Ohio which is known as the West-Veteran Corps (Captain S. E. Thomasen) met at the ern Reserve, and the various phases of country life are truthfully and graphically portrayed, while the Blackstone and an active legal practice have not eliminated the tenderness from the heart of one who is widely known in this community for many acts of kindness and genuine benevolence.
